THE GUERRILLERO: A STORY OF THE CARLIST WAR.

It is not the Carlist War of 1874, but that which raged in Spain from 1833 to 1839. The irregular bands, formed and led by volunteer captains, practised the sort of desultory warfare known as guerrilla. The first of our coloured pictures is that of a guerrillero. Let the reader of this story now look well at him. He is a young peasant of sturdy and active frame, dressed in black velvet jacket and breeches; a broad "faja" or sash of scarlet cloth, triply folded to serve as pocket and cartridge-belt; a slouched cap of thick felt, the red cap, or "boina," which is the badge of his partisan service; long gaiters of leather, and sandals made of the "esparto" grass or rush, with soles of hemp. A large red woolen scarf, the "manta," with an ornamental fringe of tassels, may be used for protection from rain or cold wind, or to cover him when sleeping in the open air at night. It is now loosely thrown over his shoulder. His hand grasps a musket or rifle, with his thumb upon its cock, ready for instant use. Such is the guerrillero, or petty warrior, here posted as sentinel of a mountain pass.

This hero's name was Pedro Becerro, of Altoviejo. His life had not been confined to his native village. Two years before this he had been hired as groom, or horse-boy, to attend a travelling English gentleman going to the eastern coast. The journey of Captain Barclay was rather hurried, as he was eager to meet his daughter, who had been passing the winter, with her uncle and aunt, in the mild climate of that Mediterranean shore. After a brief visit to Alicant, where Mr. James Barclay resided in business as a merchant, the Captain took Miss Anna with him by sea to Gibraltar, on their return to England. He discharged Pedro Becerro with a handsome gratuity above the stipulated wages of three weeks' service. Pedro soon wasted his money in the unwonted pleasures of a town. He next became serving-man to a Spanish nobleman going up to Madrid; but, after many months, felt a natural wish to revisit the home of his youth, and to see a maiden he knew there, one Teresita Manares. He set out on his way through the northern provinces. At a "venta," or roadside inn, he met and drank with a boastful corporal in the Christino service. Wine, flattery, and false promises beguiled him to enlist.

He had been standing sentry here, quite alone, nearly three hours, or pacing up and down the length of a hundred yards allotted for his beat. At the end of this walk, chancing to pause a minute, his ear caught the faint sound of a voice, uttering what seemed a cry for help, from the stony bottom of a gorge sixty or seventy feet below. Clambering a little down, beyond the protruding crags, he saw a man prostrate among the blocks of stone that filled the dry bed of a mountain torrent. Becerro called to the man, who in reply waved his arms with a gesture as of helpless distress, and implored him, "por amor de Dios, bueno amigo mio," to come down and relieve him. The kind fellow, though bound not to leave his post, did not hesitate. He quickly descended, and there found a young man in the uniform of a Carlist officer, who was badly hurt by a fall, and had his leg wedged in a crevice of the rocks. "Ay de mi, que dolor y traspaso!" groaned the stranger; "what pain, what agony I suffer! Vengo molido, hecho pedazos; I am knocked all to pieces!" Becerro tenderly released his limb from captivity and supported the tottering steps of his other foot, which was unhurt, till he could recline on a grassy bank at the roadside. "Now, my good, kind friend, whoever and whatever you are," said the Carlist, "you must take this from me"—and he thrust into Pedro's hand two gold doublets—"but you must do one thing more for me. A mile down the road you will find my servant, with two horses in waiting; run down there, send him up quickly to fetch me away. I shall be safe and well cared for at Aranza, three hours' ride from here."

Becerro was suddenly reminded by this simple request that he ought not to quit the place where his military duty had stationed him. "I am on guard, Señor Caballero," he answered with regret, and offered to return the money. "I may not go farther. But my comrade is to relieve me here at sunset, and then—ah! I had forgotten, I must report this to our sergeant when I go back to quarters. They will send for you. I am sure that Usted (Vuestra Merced) will be taken good care of by our officers; they will see it is a gentleman in distress."

"Your officers, my good fellow?" said the other, smiling. "Don't you see, Caramba, that they would make me their prisoner? I have the honour to be a soldier of his Majesty's Don Carlos. My duty is to return where I can do his Majesty's business. Why, a brave majo like you should be one of us, helping to fight for our grand old Spain, for our gallant King and Holy Church! But have I not seen you before—at Alicant, with a Caballero Inglese, el Señor Barclay?"

It was even so. The stranger found in this awkward plight was Lieutenant Hernando de Seguro, a young man of good family in Valencia, who was acquainted with the Barclays of Alicant. He had met Captain and Miss Barclay at their house, and remembered the face of the Captain's servant, Pedro. This was not all. During the six months of Anna Barclay's stay with her aunt and uncle, Hernando was accustomed to come and read "Don Quixote" and the Spanish poets, several evenings a week, to the family circle of his English friends. He readily passed from this to assisting the young lady in her studies and exercises in the noble language of his country. We know not if her relatives saw any signs of a growing attachment between these young persons.

In the lively talk which now arose between Pedro Becerro and Lieutenant Seguro upon their reminiscences of the amiable English family, Pedro's scruples of military duty were insensibly softened. This was perceived by Seguro, who did not lose the advantage it gave him. The sentinel, after a sip of brandy from the Carlist officer's flask, agreed to run and send up the Lieutenant's man and horses, before any other soldiers of the Christino army should appear.

Pedro Becerro started down the hill upon this errand, leaving Lieutenant Seguro, with a cigarito between his lips, trying to guess how many days he would be disabled from active service by the injury to his right knee and ankle. The horses and the attendant with them were soon met, and were ordered to go up and convey their master to Aranza.

But it was fated that Pedro Becerro should never return to his ordinary duty in the fourth company, second battalion, of the Villareale Caçadores. He had not got half way back when he was stopped by a martial challenge, followed by a bullet whizzing across the road. A scouting party of the Carlists instantly surrounded him. He could make no resistance, having left his rifle hidden in a bush, where his friend Don Hernando was sitting. Becerro was conducted to the Carlist headquarters, and was there detained. Before many days the Carlists won a brilliant victory. The unlucky soldier of the baby Queen Christina was now ripe for conversion. He enlisted in the Carlist army.

We know how the British Legion was formed, under Sir De Lacy Evans, to aid the partisans of constitutional freedom in Spain. One of the half-pay Peninsular officers who joined this force was Captain Barclay. But his was to be an unlucky experience of the Carlist war. In the action of March 16, 1837, at Hernani, Sir De Lacy Evans attempted to storm the Carlist lines on the hill of Santa Barbara, commanding the passage of the river Urumea. He relied on the support of the Royal Marines and of Sarsfield's Spanish troops. They did not come up. The Carlists sallied forth, and inflicted upon Sir De Lacy a severe defeat. One English officer, Captain Barclay, was left on the ground badly wounded.

An hour after this disastrous skirmish he recovered from a faintness caused by loss of blood. He was lying in the rank grass of the river's bank. A Carlist soldier came down the hill, saw, and pitied his condition. It was Pedro Becerro. He did not at first recognise his former master. But natural feelings of humanity and the charity of a good Christian inclined him, as once before, to help a suffering fellow-creature. He raised the head of his fallen enemy, and pillow'd it with a bundle of grass, then brought him water to drink and to lave his fevered face. Upon a nearer sight of this face he joyfully discovered the Caballero Inglese, Captain Barclay, and presently made himself known to the Captain.

A party of new-comers rudely interrupted their talk. These were half a dozen ruffians of the Carlist camp, intent on plunder of the dead and wounded. They seized upon the wounded Englishman, despite the angry remonstrances of Becerro. Captain Barclay's gold watch and purse, and a miniature portrait of Anna's deceased mother, set in jewels, were seized by the lawless blackguards. After satisfying their greed they proposed to indulge their ferocious temper, and to save the trouble of carrying him within the lines, by stabbing him where he lay. The brave Pedro was roused by this emergency. With his musket levelled at the foremost of the party, he declared that he would shoot any one who dared hurt the English Caballero. He would himself be killed by them, were it ten times over, before they should kill his friend. A shot was fired at Pedro by one; another rushed at him with a bayonet ; and his life would soon have been ended but for the timely arrival of a Carlist officer. This was a Major of the regiment to which those murderers belonged. At his unlooked for presence and stern rebuke, accompanied by a threat of severe punishment, they skulked back to quarters, leaving him with Becerro and Captain Barclay. The latter, suffering and weak as he lay, was yet able to see and know his second deliverer.

"Is it possible ? Dear Don Hernando, can it be you ? Don't you remember me at Alicant—Captain Barclay from England—visiting my brother there—reading your Cervantes with my daughter—why, are you along with those Carlist fellows ? Nearly finished me they had this time—if it hadn't been for this good fellow—you may remember my man Pedro, who came with my horses ? I'm your prisoner of war now, I suppose, Major de Seguro. But you'll not let me lie here to be butchered ?"

"Ave Maria purissima !" exclaimed the good-hearted Pedro. "Gallant Caballero, Señor Don Hernando de Seguro ! I have not seen Usted (your honour) since that day you fell over the rocks. I salute you, Major of our army ! Long live his Majesty Don Carlos ! Gracias a todos los Angeles ! What joy to see Usted here, at this blessed moment, to save us both alive, the noble Captain Inglese and poor Pedro, from those cursed thieves !"

"I am very happy to have come in time to serve my friends," the Major replied with hearty goodwill. He then beckoned to an orderly, and sent for a file of soldiers with a litter, to carry the wounded Englishman to a farmhouse near. A surgeon was fetched ; and during the next few weeks, by the Major's friendly attentions, with the use of his authority and influence, Captain Barclay was very well cared for. His wound began to heal.

In their conversations at this time, Hernando de Seguro once ventured, in a tone of respectful tenderness, to inquire for Miss Anna. He was told that she was now living at Bath, with her uncle and aunt, Mr. James Barclay having retired from his commercial business at Alicant, and returned to England with a competent income. An exchange of prisoners was obtained by the influence of Major de Seguro. Captain Barclay was now enabled to go on board H.M.S. Falcon, of the blockading squadron, for the benefit of the sea air to his broken health.

Pedro Becerro did not much longer remain in the Carlist military ranks. The corps in which he served met with some losses and disgraces, which occasioned its disbandment. Many of the men, tired of the hardships of campaigning, refused to join another regiment. Becerro was one of these ; he chose rather to become a domestic servant, as before. He was now hired by another English gentleman, an Oporto wine-merchant, who went there by sea from St. Sebastian.

The young Spaniard, as might be expected, did not always get on very well with his Portuguese fellow-servants, and others of that nation in his own class. There was, and perhaps still is, a deal of jealousy and mutual enmity between the lower orders of the two adjacent kingdoms. But in the city of Oporto, as before in the cities of Spain, there were strong attractions for Pedro Becerro in the variety of popular entertainments. A grand bull-fight was announced to take place in the Praça on a festival day. Its programme excited his curiosity ; but he was told that the rules and practice of public bull-fights, as conducted in Portugal, were not like those sanguinary displays common in the towns of his own country.

"The bull is not killed at all," explained his informant. "They stick the farpa, the little dart, into his fleshy neck, as often as they can. It only hurts him, and puts him into a rage. He goes at man and horse, and tosses or gores them if he can, but his horns are sheathed in wadded leather. But they use no spear or sword to give the beast a mortal wound. The best fun is the pega, when several men get hold of the bull's tail and legs. They push and heave and throw him down, while one lies between his horns and hangs on there, to weigh down his head. You must go to the Praça and see it, Pedro the Espanol ! It is a better game than your butchery Spanish trick, making a slaughterhouse of the grand show."

Pedro, however, naturally thought the "Cosas de Espana" superior to all other things in the world. He retorted that, in his opinion, the Portuguese mode of bull-fighting was only fit for milk-sops and poltroons.

We may observe that the performers in a Portuguese bullring are not hired gladiators, as in Spain. They are all noble amateurs, the Count of This, the Marquis of That, and other gentlemen of high rank. The exhibition commonly takes place under the combined patronage of the Court, the Church, and the aristocracy. Its profits are given to some hospital, orphan asylum, or religious mission.

The appointed day brought a large assembly of all classes, with Pedro Becerro and his Oporto comrade, to behold this curious spectacle of Portuguese diversions. They were closely wedged together in the dense crowd surrounding the arena. The preliminary ceremonies had begun. The "netto," or herald of the lists, had entered with blindfold eyes, and had done homage to the presiding grande. The "azemola," or sumpter mule, gaily caparisoned, had come in laden with bundles of small darts, having little flags of coloured paper affixed to their shafts. A whisper now passed round, that the famous amateur "torero," Señor Dom Jorge de Margalho, whose appearance had been eagerly desired by the Oporto "fancy," was detained at home by sickness. His place would be supplied by a stranger, whose name was not yet publicly announced. It was a Spanish caballero, who had offered his services to the managing committee at the eleventh hour.

The formal entry of this leading performer was arranged for his presentation, with due solemnity, to the Duke of Madeira, who occupied a gilt chair of state in the Royal balcony. It was expected with pleasing impatience. A flourish of trumpets was heard, a curtain of purple silk was lifted, and the hero of the Praça for that day pranced in upon a beautiful steed of pure Arab race. Our honest friend Pedro Becerro, ex-guerrillero of both the Christina and Carlist armies in Spain, could again scarcely believe his own eyes. For here, in Oporto, did he now, or did he not, see Don Hernando de Seguro, the Caballero of Valencia, the Carlist Major and aide-de-camp to General Cabrera, in the guise of a complete Torero ? The name proclaimed, though Spanish, was a fictitious one.

The Torero now dismounted and stood before the Duke. His costume was a short jacket and breeches of black velvet, fantastically shaped, very richly embroidered, and turned up with orange facings ; a vest also decorated with lace, and a shirt of fine cambric ; long stockings of white silk and large silver shoe-buckles. His thick black hair was tied behind with a bow of blue ribbon. The silk cloak upon his left arm was edged with a band of gold.

The Duke of Madeira was on the point of making the signal of authority for the commencement of the sports. But a mysterious interruption now occurred to delay the regular course of proceeding. The chief magistrate of the city, with the chief manager of the entertainment, came up to his Excellency's seat. They began a very earnest conference, in which they were soon joined by the Chief Director of Police. Very significant glances, at some moments of the conversation, were cast upon the torero who stood below. Not a word, however, could be overheard by the wondering listeners.

An unseen hand from one of the upper balconies threw into the bull-ring a folded scrap of paper, which the torero picked up. He read a few words, and his compressed lips showed a powerful resolve. But what he instantly did was most unexpected. With a silent bow of polite reverence to the Duke, who chanced not to be looking, he coolly turned round, sprang upon his horse, and rode out of the amphitheatre before anyone could think of stopping him.

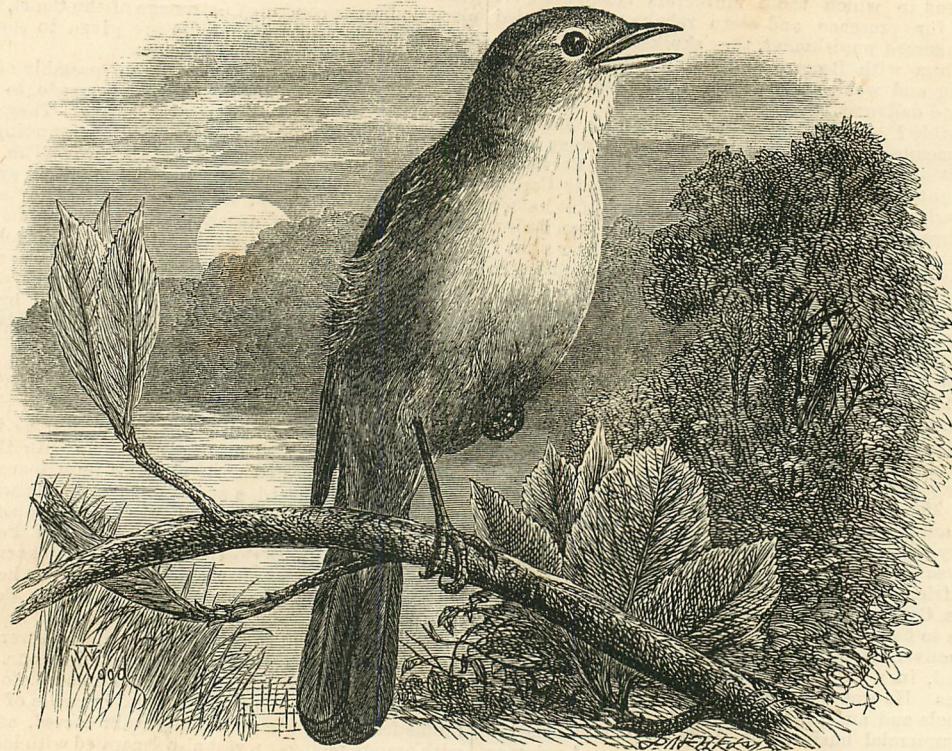

"Hold ! Stop that man !" cried the Police Director, but an instant too late. "A spy !" "A traitor !" "A Spanish Carlist !" were the exclamations of others near the Duke. The whole assembly was in an uproar, and the barrier of the ring was overleaped by hundreds. They ran out into the streets, following the hot pursuit, in which armed police constables and soldiers of the guard joined all the servants of the Praça.

Among the multitude who rushed out, some hastily mounted to overtake the flying horseman, others running wildly on foot up and down the streets, was Pedro Becerro. He soon lost his way in that foreign city. He wandered about in bewilderment till he found himself on the quays of the port. In a retired alley, which opened upon the quay, was a sort of wooden hut, cabin, or booth, which Becerro remembered having seen and visited before. It was occupied by Domingo Salles, a shifty fisherman, or fish-dealer. This man sometimes hawked a basket-full of what his partner had caught ; but he sometimes went out with his boat and nets.

Pedro was familiar with the old fisherman. They began to talk. Pedro told him of the extraordinary scene of confusion he had witnessed in the Praça; but did not, of course, tell him that he knew the fugitive Torero. After loitering here a quarter of an hour, Domingo Salles closed the door of his cabin and went to his boat at the quay steps. There Becerro accompanied him, in a listless mood, for mere companionship.

It was now growing dusk in the evening. This part of the quay seemed almost deserted. A person wrapped in a long Spanish cloak, which concealed his under-dress, paced slowly along the margin of the quay. This man, as he passed close to Becerro, jostled his shoulder. Uncertain whether this was done awkwardly or intentionally, the young Spaniard looked up in anger. But his eye met that of the muffled walker, who at that moment partly uncovered his face. It was, once again, his friend Don Hernando! It was the hunted fugitive of that day's hue and cry all over the city! Burning with anxiety and curiosity, Pedro kept silence as the man in the cloak stalked silently on. The next minute Pedro made an excuse to leave the fisherman. He quietly followed the other, turned a corner after him, and then, gaining his side, entered into a stealthy and hurried talk.

Hernando briefly told him all. He had crossed the frontier from Spain on business connected with the contraband supply of arms to the Carlists. But he had since then been persuaded by some private friends to withdraw from a hopeless cause. He had sent a letter to resign his commission in the Carlist army. He had thought himself free to go to England or France, though it would not be safe for him to return to his native province in Spain. It had never occurred to him that he was liable to arrest in Portugal under the provisions of the Quadruple Alliance. His sojourn in Oporto had been heretofore unmolested. He had not feared, therefore, to indulge a personal whim by offering to appear in the bull-fight, though under an assumed name. But now, in consequence, as he believed, of false and malignant accusations from private enemies in Spain, he had been denounced to the Portuguese Government as a spy. If he were seized now, and were sent into Spain as a prisoner, his life would there be in some danger on account of previous transactions. Hence came his desperate flight from the public amphitheatre.

His immediate endeavour, at first, was to gallop out of the city, even such a figure as he was, in the gaudy dress of the Torero. But a minute's thought, despite of the pursuing mob, showed him that this was absurd and hopeless. While still a hundred yards before them, and concealed for a moment by an angle of the street, he leaped from his horse's back over a garden wall. He dived into a house, and there hid himself a few minutes till he heard the chase go by. No inmates of the house perceived his entry. An open wardrobe contained, with other clothing, the large cloak he had borrowed, or rather stolen, to cover what remained of his fantastic theatrical attire. He had left the hiding-place in the afternoon, and found his way to the quay-side, hoping that some boatman would carry him to a foreign vessel in the harbour.

"It is a boatman you want? I have got one for you, Don Hernando!" said Pedro with great enthusiasm. "I know that old fisherman you saw just now. I'm sure he will not suspect me. I shall only tell him that you are a friend of my master, the English merchant, Señor Robinson, and that you must go on board an English ship."

"There is an English war-sloop, they say, now lying in the roads outside," replied Don Hernando. "If I can but reach her deck, my life and liberty will be safe. The English have fought against my King; I have faced their Legion and their Sir Evans in the field of battle. But they are a brave people, they will never betray a hunted refugee to the death."

Pedro conducted him at once to the boat, which Domingo was about to unloose. A few words, as Pedro had expected, were sufficient to make him take both of them as passengers to the British vessel. With feelings of intense relief, of inexpressible joy and gratitude, during the next hour, but in profound silence, and in the gathering darkness of evening, Hernando de Seguro felt himself borne away from the city towards the open sea. He was presently, with Pedro Becerro, taken on board the sloop of war. She was no other than H.M.S. Falcon. And in her, to his infinite gratification, he again met Captain Barclay, still an invalid, but very much better for the cruise. Is it needless to say how gladly and kindly Hernando was received?

Is it needless to finish the story? Hernando accompanied Captain Barclay to England. He soon inherited, despite his political proscription, a modest fortune invested in English securities. He married Anna Barclay, to whom also her uncle James bequeathed his property. None of them ever cared again to live in Spain. As for Pedro, the brave guerrillero, he got a round sum of money from the grateful friends whom he had served. He went home to Altoviejo and became the husband of Teresita. He is a thriving farmer, and a man of peace.

FEEDING THE BIRDS.

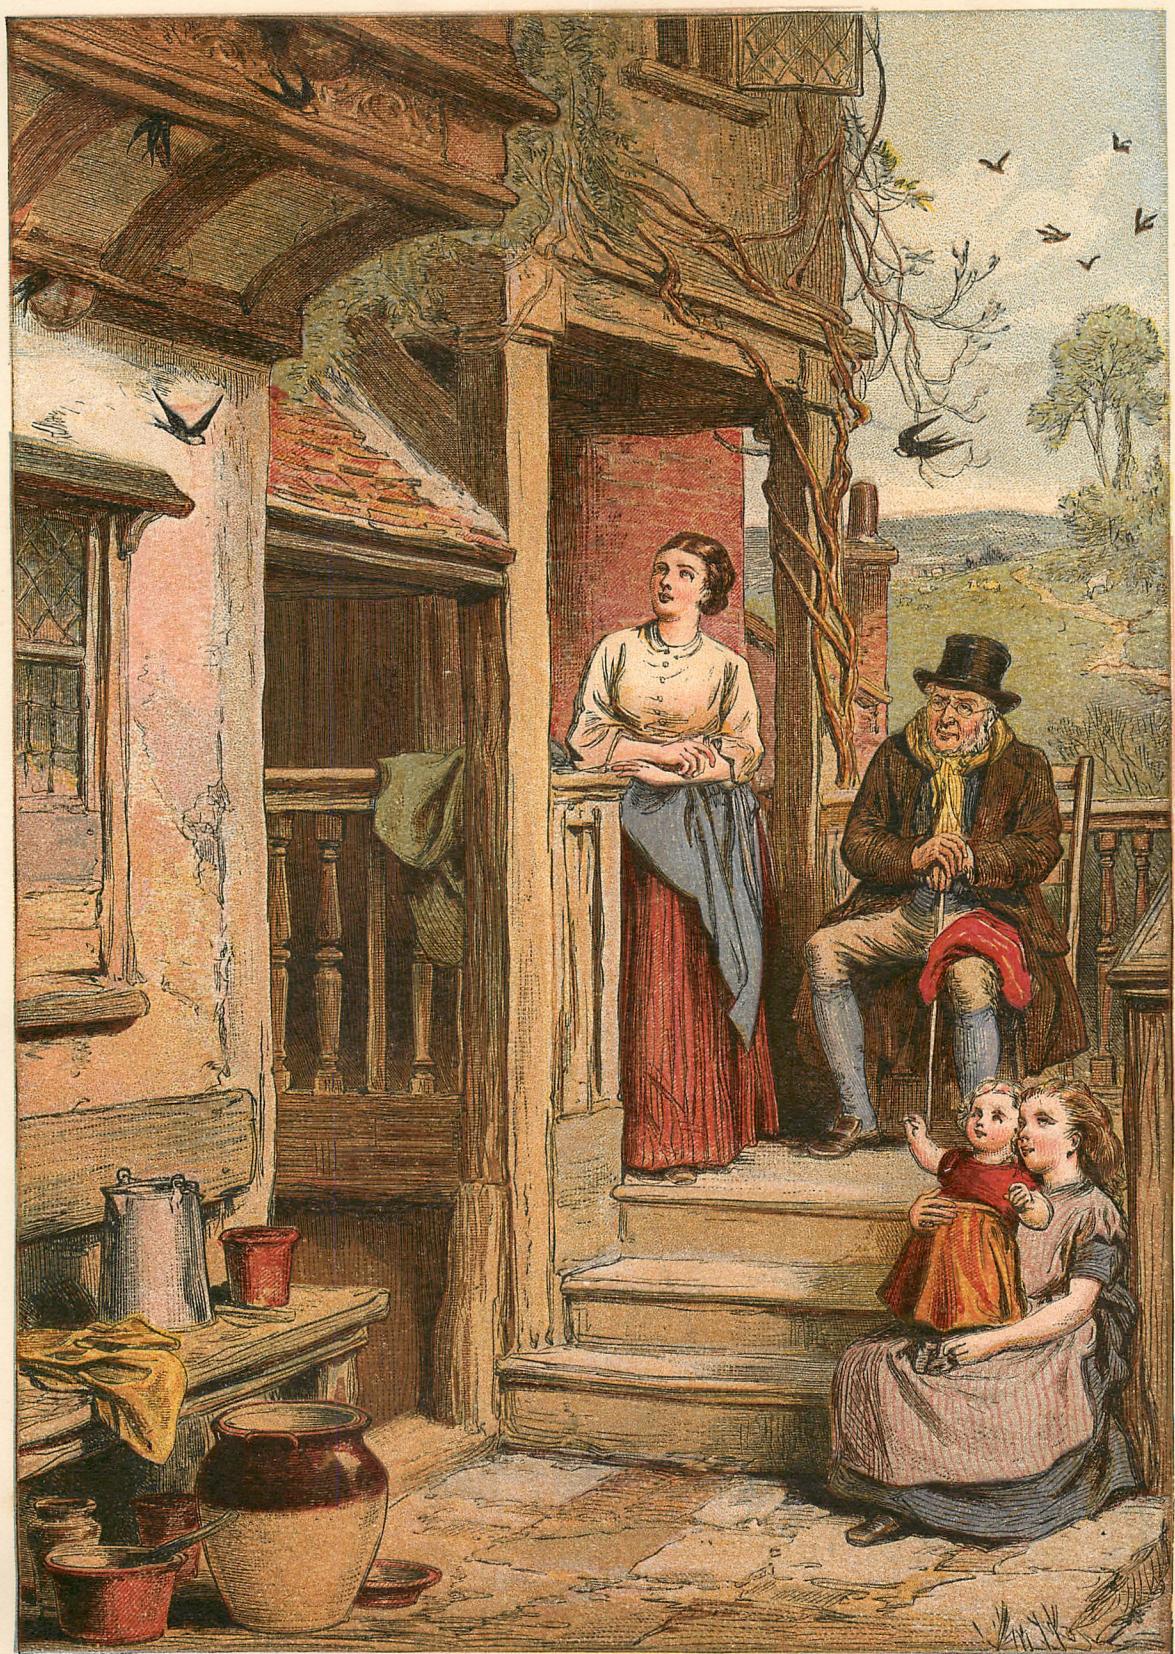

Little Willy, nearly seven,
Sister Mary, not yet nine,
Standing at the open window,
Call the Birds to come and dine.
White the snow in field and garden,
Like the sheets in Willy's bed;
Yet the sun above is shining;
And the holly-fruit is red;
And the leaves of Winter's holly
Glisten with as glad a green
As the verdure of the Summer
In the years a child has seen;
And although, perhaps, to-morrow
Frost will pinch his hands and feet,
Or the storm, that beats his dwelling,
Pelt the window-glass with sleet,
While the trees, that roar with terror,
Toss their branches in alarm,
Willy does not fear the winter;
God, he knows, will do no harm;
And he knows, by God in wisdom
Earth and sky are ordered so;
Warmth and cold of changing weather,
Sun to shine, and wind to blow;
Rain to fill with kindly moisture
Fertile furrows of the field;
Frost and snow its clods to soften,
That the soil its richness yield;
Light of days, to work or play in,
Dark of nights, for deep repose;
Changing scenes for health to live in,
Good alike, as Willy knows;
Good for men and good for cattle,
And for birds, that fly the air,
And for tiny creeping insects,
Equally the Maker's care;
So he looks, and Sister Mary,
On the Birds with heart of love;
Funny little feathered people,
Some below, and some above;
Some that scrape the pathway gravel,
Some that perch on bough or twig;
Little fellows, pertly strutting
As in fancy they were big;
Strutting, flying, hopping, chirping,
Gaping for the crumbs he gives,
Come, you Birds of Willy's garden,
Willy loves whatever lives;
He has learnt the wisest lesson
Child or Man shall ever win;
"All who joy would gain must share it Happiness is born a Twin."

A LANDING PARTY.

They landed—I made fast our boat—
Sweet Rose and Cousin Will,
She tied her scarf about his throat
To save him from a chill.
He kissed her hand that was so kind;
The swan alone was near.
To hear that couple speak their mind,
How each to each was dear!

RETURNING SWALLOWS.

They fled our winter clime
To sunny lands of Spain
They flew to us again
Ere bloomed our summer time.
Then in his cottage home
The aged Briton smiled,
And laughed his daughter's child
To see the swallows come.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK FOR 1875.

POST OFFICE REGULATIONS.

Facility is given to the Post Office in the discharge of its daily duties, and greater security afforded to the public, by careful attention to the following:—

To post all letters, &c., as early as practicable, especially when sent in large numbers, as is frequently the case with newspapers and circulars.

To make the address legible and complete, giving the name of the post town, and if there be more than one town in the kingdom of that name, or if the post town be not well known, adding the name of the county. Letters posted in one part of the United Kingdom and intended for another part (as, for example, letters posted in England and intended for Scotland) should have the name of the country to which they are sent added to the other part of the address. The number of the house, too, if in a street, is a great assistance.

To see that every letter, newspaper, or other packet sent by post is securely folded and fastened. Sealing-wax will not easily adhere to the gummed portion of an envelope. When postage stamps are remitted they should be inclosed in paper sufficiently thick to prevent them being seen or felt through the cover. It should be remembered that every packet has to be several times handled, and that even when in the mail-bag it is exposed to pressure and friction. Unless, therefore, the article be light and pliant it should be inclosed in strong paper, linen, parchment, or some other material which will not readily tear or break. The observance of this precaution is especially necessary whenever any fragile articles of value are forwarded by post. These should always be inclosed in a wooden or tin box. Owing to neglect of these precautions many postal packets burst open, causing much trouble to the department and risk to the owners, it being sometimes impossible to determine to what packet a particular article belongs.

All inland letters and packets which, from the way they are folded or packed, obviously contain jewellery or watches, and which have not been duly tendered for registration, must be compulsorily registered and charged a double registration fee of 8d., in the same manner as letters containing coin. Letters, however, must not be registered on the mere suspicion that they contain any of these articles, nor must there be any prying into them for the purpose of ascertaining their contents; and it is only when, as in the case of letters containing coin, there is no doubt that some of the articles enumerated are inclosed that they are to be subjected to this regulation. Letters are often found in post-offices under some of the following conditions:—1, posted in such thin covers that their contents are clearly visible; 2, posted with some of the contents protruding from the covers; 3, posted without being sealed or in any way closed against inspection; 4, accidentally come open in transit. Under any of these circumstances there will be no difficulty in determining whether the contents are such as to bring the letter within the rule.

When complaint is made of letters or newspapers lost, miscarried or delayed, furnish information as precise as possible regarding all the facts of the case, and inclose whatever documents may throw light upon it. The day and hour at which the letter or newspaper was posted, as well as the office at which and the person by whom this was done, should always be stated; and, when possible, the cover or wrapper in an entire state should be sent.

For the day mails to the provinces, Ireland, Scotland, France, and the Continent generally, and for the colonial and foreign mails via Southampton, letters can be registered at the chief office, and at the head district and branch offices, at the ordinary fee between 6 and 7.30 p.m., and at the town receiving-houses between 5.30 and 7.30 p.m. the previous evening.

OVERCHARGED LETTERS.—Overcharges are returned between the hours of 10 and 4, on presenting the overcharged letters at the office for the sale of stamps, &c., at the General Post Office. Or the letter may be sent to the office by the letter-carrier of the district, and the overcharge will be returned with the letter in two days.

LETTERS "TO BE CALLED FOR."

The Poste Restante being intended solely for the accommodation of strangers and travellers who have no permanent abode in London, letters for residents in London must not be addressed "Post Office till called for." Letters addressed to "Initials" or "Fictitious Names" at the Poste Restante, or any district or branch office, are returned to the writers. Letters may not be redirected from a private address to the Poste Restante.

All persons applying for letters at the Poste Restante must be prepared to give the necessary particulars to the clerk on duty, in order to prevent mistakes and to ensure the delivery of the letters to the persons to whom they properly belong.

Letters for passengers on board the Cunard and Inman packets for America touching at Queenstown, or on board the Mediterranean packets about to sail from Southampton with the mails for India, Australia, China, &c., may be posted in any part of the United Kingdom up to the time at which ordinary registered letters to go by the same packets are received. They must be registered, and the postage and registration fee must be fully prepaid, and they must be addressed to the care of the commander of the packet.

Letters for passengers on board the Canadian packets touching at Londonderry may, under similar conditions, be posted up to the same time as ordinary registered letters for Canada. These must be addressed to the care of the officer in charge of the mails.

The letters should be addressed thus:—"Mr. —, on board the mail packet for —, at Queenstown [Londonderry or Southampton]. Care of the officer in charge of the mails," or "care of the commander of the packet;" as the case may be.

Letters directed to the care of the packet agent at Suez, and dispatched by the mail via Brindisi, will probably reach passengers for India, &c., who have sailed in the packet which left Southampton the previous week.

THE NEWSPAPER HALFPENNY POSTAGE

applies to any publication consisting wholly or in great part of political or other news, or of articles relating thereto, or to other current topics, with or without advertisements, and published at intervals of not more than seven days; and for each newspaper, whether posted singly or in a packet, the prepaid postage is one halfpenny. Every newspaper must be so folded as to admit of the title being read. No packet of newspapers must exceed 14 lb. weight nor 2 ft. in length.

In order that no failure may occur in the delivery of newspapers through the covers becoming detached, it is recommended that the addresses be written on exposed parts of the newspapers themselves as well as on the covers.

COLONIAL AND FOREIGN.—Under the powers given to the Postmaster-General by the Post Office Act, 1870, the regulations relating to the registration of publications for transmission abroad as Newspapers have been revised. The definition laid down in the Act, in regard to newspapers which may be registered for transmission through the post in the United Kingdom, is alike applicable to those which may be registered for transmission abroad, except that for foreign transmission a newspaper may be published at intervals of thirty-one days, and that it (but not its supplement) may be printed on sheets stitched together. Newspapers going abroad are also subject to the following regulations:—"Prices Current" and "Market Reports," but not private price-lists or trade catalogues, are admitted to the same privileges as newspapers for foreign transmission. Publications registered for transmission abroad must be posted within eight days from the date of publication, including the day of publication, otherwise they will be rejected. It is forbidden to introduce into Russia, through the post, political newspapers of any kind, and therefore they must be obtained through the agency of some established bookseller. Printed price-currents, in covers open at both ends, are not forbidden.

THE POSTAGE OF THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, WITH ORDINARY SUPPLEMENT, for the United Kingdom and the Channel Islands must be prepaid by affixing a halfpenny stamp. Copies for the Colonies and Foreign Countries—printed on thin paper (the ordinary Edition being charged double)—must have stamps affixed to them at the following rates, and must be posted within eight days of the date of publication:—

Newspapers for India and the adjacent countries, via Southampton, 1d.; via Brindisi, 3d., not exceeding 4 oz.; a further rate of 1d. being chargeable for every additional 4 oz. or fraction of 4 oz. Payment in advance is the only condition required under the new rates, in default of which no newspaper will be forwarded.

PATTERN AND SAMPLE POST.

INLAND.—Pattern and Sample Post is restricted to bona fide trade patterns or samples of merchandise. The colonial and foreign sample post is variable both in limit of weight and also in rates of postage. See British Postal Guide, published quarterly. Goods sent for sale, or in execution of an order (however small the quantity may be), or any articles sent by one private individual to another which are not actually patterns or samples, are not admissible. There must be no writing or printing upon any packet except the address of the person for whom it is intended, the address of the sender, a trade-mark or number, and the price of the articles; nor may there be any writing or printing or other thing inclosed, except such address, mark, number, and price, and a written or printed description of the articles; and these particulars may be on labels attached to the samples. If this rule be infringed, the packet will be treated as a letter.

POST-CARDS.—Post-cards, which bear a halfpenny impressed stamp, are available for transmission between places in the United Kingdom only. The front (or stamped) side is intended for the address only. On the reverse side, any communication, whether of the nature of a letter or otherwise, may be written or printed; but such communication must not extend to the front side. Private cards may be stamped on application to the office of Inland Revenue, Somerset House. Postage-cards can only be purchased in packets of one dozen and upwards.

BOOK POST.—A Book-Packet may contain not only books, paper, or other substance in ordinary use for writing or printing, whether plain or written or printed upon (to the exclusion of any written letter or communication of the nature of a letter); photographs, when not on glass or in frames containing glass or any like substance, and anything usually appertaining to such articles in the way of binding and mounting, or necessary for their safe transmission by post, but also Circulars, when these are wholly or in great part printed, engraved, or lithographed. The postage is one halfpenny for every 2 oz., or fraction of that weight. A packet posted wholly unpaid will be charged with double the book-postage; and, if posted partially prepaid, with double the deficiency. Every book-packet must be posted either without a cover or in a cover open at both ends, and in such a manner as to admit of the contents being easily withdrawn for examination; otherwise it will be treated as a letter. No book-packet may contain anything sealed or otherwise closed against inspection; nor must there be any letter, nor any communication of the nature of a letter, whether separate or otherwise, unless the whole of such letter or communication be printed. It must not exceed 5 lb. in weight and 18 in. in length.

POST OFFICE TELEGRAPHHS.

The charge for telegrams throughout the United Kingdom, including the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man, but excepting the Scilly, Orkney, and Shetland Islands, is 1s. for the first twenty words, and 3d. for every additional five words—i.e., for every additional group of not more than five words; the names and addresses of the sender and receiver not being counted.

If the addressee resides at a greater distance than three miles from the terminal telegraph office, portage is charged for delivery by mounted messengers at the rate of 1s. per double mile, except in the case of telegrams for Ireland, where the charge is only 8d. per double mile.

If the sender requires his telegram to be forwarded by post or by train from the terminal telegraph office he must write the words "by post" or "by train" in the space provided for that purpose at the foot of the message.

Telegrams written on the proper forms and properly prepaid may be handed to rural messengers who are proceeding to post telegraph-offices for transmission therefrom.

Telegrams written in any European language are charged for according to the number of words they contain; but all unintelligible words not forming part of any European language are charged for as if each syllable were one word. Should the word not be composed of syllables, then five letters are considered as equal to one word.

Telegrams may be repeated at the request of the sender, if he desires to adopt this extra security against risk of error, by being resignalised from each office at which they are received to the office from which they are forwarded. The charge for repetition is one half the ordinary tariff; fractions of threepence being reckoned as twopence.

The cost of a reply to a telegram may be prepaid; and prepaid reply pass will then be delivered to the addressee, who will be at liberty to send his reply, from any postal telegraph station, at any time within two months after the date of the original telegram.

The following exceptional compound words are charged for as one word:—Midday, midnight, noonday, se'might, cannot, to-day, to-night, to-morrow, yesternight, yesterday, halfpenny, twopence, and pence up to elevenpence. Also all denominations of trades, such as linendraper, silversmith, share-broker, &c. Abbreviations of auxiliary verbs designated by apostrophes (such as can't, won't, don't, I'll, you'll, couldn't, shouldn't, &c.) are charged for as one word. By writing words in this way, however, there is a greater risk of error.

Numbers expressed in figures in an inland telegram are counted as so many words, according to the number of figures employed. For example—“7” counts as one word, “12” as two words, “385” as three words.

The department is not liable for losses incurred through the incorrect transmission, delay, or non-delivery of telegrams.

Telegraph offices are, as a rule, open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. on week days, and from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. on Sunday. There are, however, offices in several of the larger towns which are open for longer periods; and at certain offices in London and in the country there is attendance continuously during the day and night, both on week days and Sundays.

TOWN DELIVERIES.

The portion of each district within about three miles of the General Post Office is designated the town delivery, and the remainder the suburban delivery.

SUBURBAN DELIVERIES.

There are seven despatches daily to the suburban districts. The first is at 6.30 a.m. to all places within the London district limits; and includes the correspondence by the night mails from the provinces, and by any colonial or foreign mails arriving in sufficient time. This delivery is generally completed in the nearer suburbs by 9 a.m., and at the more distant places between 9 and 10 a.m. The second despatch is at 9.30 a.m. to the nearer suburban districts. The third is at 11.30 a.m., and comprises, with a few exceptions, every part of the London district. The fourth despatch, at 2.30 p.m., is to most of the suburban districts, isolated localities excepted. The fifth despatch, at 4.30 p.m., extends to the whole of the suburban districts, and, except in the remoter rural places, the letters are delivered the same evening. The sixth despatch, at 6 p.m. is also to the nearer suburbs. The seventh despatch is at 7 p.m. Letters for this despatch posted at the town receiving houses and pillar boxes by 6 p.m., or at the chief office of the district to which they are addressed by 7.30 p.m., are delivered the same evening at all the principal places within about six miles of the General Post Office. At the more distant places the letters are delivered early the following morning.

COLONIAL AND FOREIGN MAIIS.

Australia.—Mails to these colonies are dispatched twice a month.

India.—Mails to India are now dispatched every Friday via Brindisi, and every Thursday morning via Southampton. The postage of letters to India and Ceylon per half ounce is 9d. when sent via Southampton, and 1s. when sent via Brindisi. The scale advances by half ounces instead of by ounces.

United States of America.—Letters, 6 cents per single rate of 15 grammes (one half-ounce) in the United States, and 3d. (6 cents) in the United Kingdom; prepayment optional. A fine will, however, be levied and collected in addition to the deficient postage on each unpaid, or insufficiently prepaid, letter received by one country from the other. Newspapers, 2 cents each in the United States, and 1d. each in the United Kingdom, if not exceeding 4 oz. in weight. Book-packets, including printed papers of all kinds, &c., and patterns and samples of merchandise, including seeds and grain, when not exceeding 1 oz. in weight, 2 cents in the United States, and 1d. in the United Kingdom.

Letters for such places in Turkey and Asia Minor as have no Austrian post office should be addressed to the care of an agent residing in the nearest port at which an Austrian post office has been established. It is recommended also that any letters for Erzeroum and other parts of the interior of Armenia, or for Persia, be addressed to the care of some agent at Samsoun or Trebizond, to be forwarded to their destination.

Letters for Russia should have the name of the town added in either English, French, or German; and if for the smaller towns in Russia they should bear as a part of their address the name of the province or government in which they are situated.

When the time for making up a colonial or foreign mail is marked "Morning," the latest time for posting letters by it at the chief office is 8.55 a.m.; at the Lombard-street branch office, 8.30 a.m.; at the Charing-cross branch office, 4 a.m.; and at the district offices, 6 a.m. In the case of the French mail, letters must be posted at the E.C. and W.C. pillar-boxes at 3.45 a.m., and at the several branch offices and pillar-boxes in the town districts not later than 4 a.m.; in certain suburban boxes not later than 3 a.m.; and at the chief office not later than 6.30 a.m. When marked "Evening," the latest time is the same as for the inland night mails.

MONEY ORDERS

are issued at the chief district offices and at the branch offices, Lombard-street and Charing-cross, between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.; on Saturdays between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m.; at other branch offices and receiving-houses in the town districts between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.; at branch offices in the suburban districts between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m.; and at receiving-houses in the suburban districts between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. On Saturdays savings bank deposits are received at all receiving-offices until 8 p.m. The commission on inland money orders is:—For sums under 10s., 1d.; of 10s. and under £1, 2d.; and for every additional pound or fraction of a pound, 1d. No order is allowed to contain a fractional part of a penny, and the printed forms only should be used which are supplied gratuitously.

INTERNATIONAL MONEY ORDERS BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES.—Offices have been selected in all the States and territories. No single order will be issued for more than 50 dols., but persons desiring to remit larger sums can obtain additional money orders. The rates of commission on these money orders will range from 0.25 on orders not exceeding 10 dols., to 1 dol. 25c. for over 40 dols. and not exceeding 50 dols.

The scale of commission for orders payable abroad is as follows:—

INCREMENT OF POPULATION.

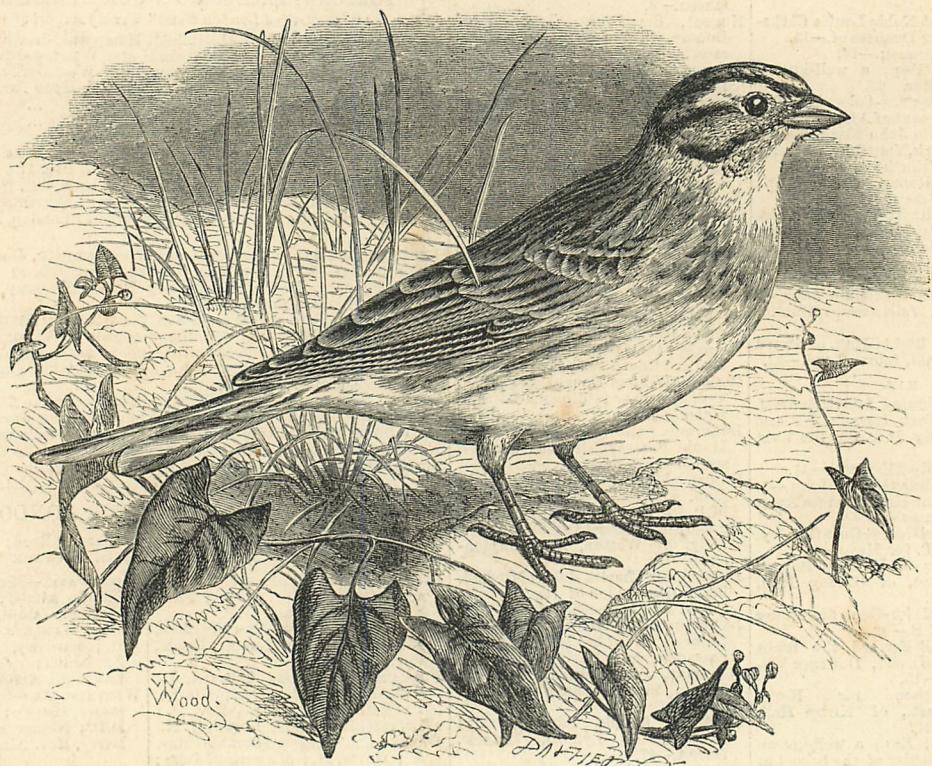

The following table represents accurately the increase in the commerce and population of the Christian world during the last seventeen years. It is of great interest on account of its bearing upon the questions whether the population multiplies too fast for the good of the race, and whether the general comfort of the individual is being increased or decreased:—

	FOREIGN COMMERCE.	POPULATION.
	1855.	1872.
Great Britain	£268,400,000	£609,600,000
France	150,300,000	285,800,000
United States	107,340,000	232,800,000
Belgium	69,000,000	193,800,000
Germany, imp'ts only	53,200,000	100,000,000
Austria	26,000,000	59,400,000
Russia in Europe	45,400,000	103,000,000
Italy	32,200,000	103,600,000
Spain	32,500,000	27,8,000,000
Netherlands	54,000,000	88,000,000
Sweden	9,000,000	14,600,000
Total	£848,340,000	£1,855,200,000
Increase in seventeen years (commerce)	...	118,5 per cent.
Increase in seventeen years (population)	...	14,8 per cent.
Foreign commerce in 1855 per head of population	£318
Foreign commerce in 1872 per head of population	£595
Increase per cent	...	90

The most striking deduction to be made from this table is not the great increase of commerce, but the fact that in seventeen years the amount for each individual has nearly doubled. There has been a slow growth in the number of the people, but a very rapid growth in the commerce. Commerce is an index of wealth, and increase of wealth means, in the highest degree, augmentation of physical comforts and well-being.

THE POPULATION OF FRANCE.—France contained in 1872 35,362,253 citizens and 740,668 foreigners. The former consisted of 30,676,943 natives of the departments in which they resided, 4,543,764 persons who had removed from one department to another, 126,243 Alsatians and Lorraines who had elected to continue French subjects, and 15,303 naturalised foreigners. The foreigners comprised 347,558 Belgians, 112,579 Italians, 64,808 Alsatians and Lorraines who had accepted German nationality, 52,954 Spaniards, 52,950 Russians, 42,834 Poles, 42,830 Swiss, 39,361 Germans, 26,003 English, 17,077 Dutch, 7328 Scandinavians, 6859 Americans, 5116 Austrians and Hungarians, 3843 Asiatics, 1173 Turks, Greeks, &c., and 9826 persons from other countries.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S PARLIAMENTS.—The Parliament which passed into the region of history in March, 1834, was the eighth Parliament which had been assembled under the reign of her Majesty, and the tenth since the passing of the first Reform Bill. The Parliament which was sitting at the death of William IV., in June, 1837, came to an end in the following month by the demise of the Crown, and the new Parliament elected in the August, which met in the November of that year, was dissolved in June, 1841, having lasted four years. Her Majesty's second Parliament, elected in August, 1841, was dissolved in July, 1847, having lasted nearly six years. Her third Parliament, which met in the November of the same year, was dissolved in July, 1852, having lasted about four years and three-quarters. The fourth Parliament of her Majesty met in November, 1852, and was dissolved in March, 1857, having lasted four years and a half. The fifth Parliament of her Majesty was the briefest in its duration, having met in April, 1857, and having been dissolved in the spring of 1859, after a life of little more than two years' duration. The next Parliament, which assembled in April, 1859, lasted six years, being dissolved early in 1865; and her Majesty's seventh Parliament lasted from the spring of 1865 to the autumn of 1868, about three years and a half. The eighth Parliament, known as Mr. Gladstone's Parliament, was elected in November and December, 1868, and enjoyed an existence of a little over five years. Consequently, it lived longer than any of its predecessors, except only those of 1841-7 and 1859-65. As her Majesty has now reigned above thirty-seven years, it will be seen upon an easy calculation that the average duration of the Parliaments which have been assembled at Westminster under Queen Victoria has been a little over four years and a half.

ECLIPSES IN 1875.

The first is a Total Eclipse of the Sun, on April 6, invisible from Europe. It begins on the Earth generally at about 3h. 58m. in the morning of the 6th, Greenwich mean time, in longitude 35½ deg. east of Greenwich and in latitude 33 deg. 4 min. south, not far from the southernmost part of Africa in the Indian Ocean, and near Natal. The central line passes across the Indian Ocean, somewhat south of Madagascar, north of Sumatra, and near to Formosa. The eclipse ends in longitude 134½ deg. east of Greenwich and north latitude 23½ deg. nearly, at 4 minutes after 9h. a.m.

The Central Eclipse begins at about 4h. 54m. a.m., Greenwich mean time, and ends about 8h. 20m. a.m. It will be seen as a partial eclipse from the southern part of Africa, from China, and from the several islands between Australia and China.

When the centres of the Sun and Moon are in the same straight line with the eye of the observer, and the apparent diameter of the Moon is greater than that of the Sun, the eclipse of the Sun will be total, as in the preceding case, but when her apparent diameter be less than that of the Sun the eclipse will be annular; and such will be the case in the second eclipse of this year, which takes place on Sept. 29, 1875, and visible as a partial eclipse from Greenland, Iceland, England, Spain, and the greater part of Africa.

It begins on the Earth generally at 10h. 1m. a.m., Greenwich mean time, in longitude 60 deg. 56 min. west of Greenwich, and latitude 38 deg. 10 min. north, in the North Atlantic Ocean, at a point south of Nova Scotia and east of Philadelphia; passes nearly over the Cape de Verd Islands, north of Sierra Leone, over the Gulf of Guinea, across Africa, to a point whose longitude is 29 deg. 55 min. east of Greenwich and latitude 20½ deg.

The central eclipse begins at 11h. 7m., and ends at 2h. 49m., Greenwich mean time.

At London a partial eclipse is visible, amounting only to a little more than one tenth of the Sun's diameter at its greatest phase. The eclipse begins at 11h. 25m. a.m., its greatest phase takes place 0h. 7m., and it ends at 0h. 47m.

At Dublin the eclipse begins at 10h. 44m. a.m., its greatest phase is at 11h. 32m. a.m., and it ends at 0h. 20m., mean time at Dublin.

At Edinburgh the eclipse begins at 11h. 10m. a.m., its greatest phase is at 11h. 48m., and it ends at 0h. 24m., mean time at Edinburgh.
